WHAT THE DIPLOMA IS

The Diploma in Investor Relations (DipIR®) is the IR Society's senior level qualification. Developed by expert IR practitioners and educational organisations, the Diploma examines candidates on their understanding and practical application of the skills, tools and expertise needed to become leaders in the profession.

The DipIR is open to IROs and IR Advisers. In 2021, we are making the DipIR more relevant for IR Advisers, recognising the attraction of the qualification to experienced advisers as well as in-house IROs.

We will be tailoring the "In Practice" exam paper to ensure candidates with an advisory background will be able to demonstrate their breadth of experience through this qualification.

The qualification is looking for candidates to demonstrate the following:

- A good level of knowledge and experience of investor relations, including a strong grasp of key practical and theoretical aspects to the profession, and a clear understanding of the ethical and best practice approaches to key issues
- A breadth of knowledge of current topics and issues facing the profession, and an ability to place an issue in its wider context, including the legal and regulatory framework currently in force within the UK listed company sector
- An ability to communicate confidently and effectively in both written and oral formats, and handle a Q&A discussion on a chosen topic.

The DIP IR is a natural progression for those who have previously taken the Certificate in IR (CIR®) and have subsequently built up at least five years' experience in IR or a related field.

We recommend that all Diploma candidates take around six months from starting the programme to taking the exam and the presentation module. You will receive mentor support and attend an introduction session setting out the programme, a half-day Ethics Course and a half-day Revision Course.

The exam and presentation module may be deferred with the agreement of IR Society executive team but must be taken within 18 months from starting the programme.

On successful completion of the qualification, candidates will receive a certificate and are entitled to put DiplIR® after their name. This shows that an individual has demonstrated sufficient experience and understanding of the IR profession to undertake a senior role, whether in-house as a corporate IRO, or as a trusted adviser or service provider to the industry.

As with the CIR, the Diploma in IR sits under the auspices of the IR Society's Examination Committee.

WHO SHOULD CONSIDER SITTING THE DIPLOMA IN IR?

Each candidate will be considered on their own merits and prior experience.

In general, however, it is expected that Diploma candidates will:

- Be members of the IR Society
- Have successfully completed the IR Society's Certificate in Investor Relations (CIR®) qualification (or be able to demonstrate proven knowledge of the regulatory environment in which IROs operate through other relevant qualifications and experience)
- Have a minimum of five years' experience in IR or a related profession, of which at least two should be in a senior role.

It is open to both to those working in-house and to those acting as a trusted adviser or service provider to the IR profession.

The Diploma in IR is a very different examination from the IR Society's Certificate in IR. As is appropriate for a senior level qualification, much of the preparation needs to be undertaken as self-study, while examination questions are open and unstructured. Candidates unable to demonstrate significant experience in IR or a related profession are unlikely to be successful.

THE APPLICATION PROCESS

We will accept a maximum of 12 candidates onto each Diploma programme.

It is important to us that every candidate is sufficiently motivated and experienced; we want to give you the best possible opportunity to be successful. That's why we ask everyone to complete an application form. It's designed both to help us understand you better and also to help you identify any training gaps you may have. It will also help us match you to the right mentor.

Specifically, it asks you for:

- Your personal details
- Selection of route (IRO or Adviser)
(This should be done at start of programme. There is no restriction on the chosen route and candidates can change their route up to the start of the written exams)
- Your professional qualifications and training
(We prefer candidates to have passed the IR Society's CIR. If you haven't done so, you should show other relevant qualifications and experience which demonstrate your proven knowledge of the regulatory environment in which IROs operate)
- Your involvement in Investor Relations
(We would normally expect you to demonstrate at least five years' relevant experience, of which at least two should be in a senior role)
- Your contribution to the profession and the IR Society
(The Diploma is intended to support your progression into leadership roles. Examples of engagement in the profession are very helpful)
- Your choice of optional topics
(This is explained in more detail later within this pack)
- Around 500 words explaining why you believe the Diploma in IR will be of value to you
- A completed competences framework
(We have identified the key competences we believe are required to work in IR. For each, we have shown the level of knowledge and experience we would expect successful Diploma candidates to have and, by comparing your own level of knowledge and experience with the guide, you can identify where you may need further training)

CHOOSING YOUR OPTIONAL TOPICS

The Diploma is designed to support you as you move towards a leadership position. As you progress, you will be increasingly expected to have some familiarity with functions / activities outside the core IR role. That's why we ask you to choose a minimum of three 'Optional Topics' on which you can be examined. The full list of available topics is shown in Appendix 1.

You may already have worked in some of these areas earlier in your career. However, at least one of the Optional Topics you choose should be outside your immediate employment experience.

To help you make your choice, we have prepared a more detailed syllabus for each Optional Topic and provided suggested reading and training opportunities for each. These will be provided to you separately by the IR Society team.

SUPPORT FROM YOUR MENTOR

A unique feature of the Diploma is the provision of a mentor. The mentor pool will include both in-house IROs and senior IR advisers, and often a current or former board member of the IR Society. The role of the mentor is to be available to provide advice and support on request to a candidate and to help guide on preparation and readiness to sit the Diploma exam.

Typically, you can expect to have at least three meetings/calls with your assigned mentor, usually at the following times:

- After committing to the Diploma in IR qualification
- Before the written exams, to check progress and answer any remaining questions
- Before the presentation module.

You should be looking to create a long-term relationship with your mentor. This needs both of you to be actively engaged in making the relationship a success. Your mentor has volunteered to help you and the IR Society and you should be pro-active in seeking their support.

PREPARING FOR THE EXAMINATION

The Diploma in IR is a very different examination from the CIR. The Diploma is looking to examine a range of technical and practical skills, with much drawn from a candidate's own work experience.

Unlike the CIR, there is no "one size suits all" study guide. We expect candidates to demonstrate the experience they have gained in their working lives as well as the independent study they have done around the syllabus topics. As a result, the amount and type of preparation required (and the time it takes) will vary from candidate to candidate depending on their background. Study comprises:

Self-study and other training courses

You should expect much of your preparation to be undertaken as self-study. This can be supported if required by relevant courses already offered by the IR Society, for example focusing on development areas and your chosen Optional Topics. The Regulation Courses are a useful refresher for all candidates. In addition, it is worth considering additional study through sister organisations such as the Company Secretary and Corporate Treasurers professional bodies.

Completion of the Competences Framework should help highlight any such training requirements. The IR Society team can also help identify courses which would meet your needs and suit your budget, as well as advise on self-study.

A half-day Ethics Course and a half-day Revision Course are offered to all candidates as a part of the examination fee.

Ethics course and relevance

The Ethics Course provides a reminder of the key regulatory and legislative issues, examines the IR Society's Code of Conduct and allows a safe environment in which to test ethical dilemmas.

Section A of each written paper examines candidates on their understanding and experience of the regulatory and legislative environment and the ethical issues relevant to our profession. Candidates cannot pass the overall examination without providing a pass-quality answer to these two questions.

Revision Course and relevance

The Revision Course provides more detail of the format of the examination and what is expected to achieve success. It uses example questions and model answers and builds on the reported experience of previous candidates.

THE FORMAT OF THE EXAMINATION

In summary, each candidate will sit two formal, written (computer-based) examinations, each of up to three hours in length. All questions will be open, realistic and testing and will normally expect an essay-style response. They may be case-study based, and they will be designed to test the identified IR competencies in the specific subjects, as shown in Appendix 1. (Examples of questions used in Papers 1 and 2 can be found in Appendix 2).

You will also separately be asked to make a 15-minute presentation on a topic of your choice to experts in the field of IR. You will then answer questions on your presentation.

Written papers in more detail

Paper 1 – Principles of IR

- SECTION A is compulsory and provides 30% of the total mark for this paper. It will contain short answer questions related to legislation / regulation / ethical matters
- SECTION B provides 40% of the total mark for this paper. You will be asked to choose one out of three theory-based essay questions relating to the role of IR. Each will cut across the syllabus content, which is shown in Appendix 1
- SECTION C provides 30% of the total mark for this paper. You will be asked to choose one from a number of Optional Topics questions. Each question will either be specific to one of the options or will be so open that it can be answered for many options.

Paper 2 – IR in Practice

- SECTION A is compulsory and provides 30% of the total mark for this paper. You will typically be asked one or two short-answer practical questions, relating to legislation / regulation / ethical matters. These may be based on a case study
- SECTION B provides 40% of the total mark for this paper. You will be asked to choose one of three practical essay questions, relating to the role of IR. Each will cut across the syllabus content, which is shown in Appendix 1
- SECTION C provides 30% of the total mark for this paper. You will be asked to choose one from a number of Optional Topics questions. As in Paper 1, each question will either be specific to one of the options or will be so open that it can be answered for many options.

The Presentation Module in more detail

- This is designed to test your competency in some of the softer attributes required as you progress in your career. These include gravitas, authority/presence, credibility, clear communications and presentation skills. (See 'Required Competencies' on the DipIR Application Form for further details). We are told by head-hunters that these attributes can provide the differentiating factor in an employment decision, as they tend to be the ones lacking in otherwise high-quality candidates for senior roles

- You will be required to make an uninterrupted formal presentation lasting about 15 minutes, in which you showcase an IR-related piece of work of which you are particularly proud or discuss a generic topic (if confidentiality issues preclude the use of an actual case)
- You will then answer questions on your presentation for 10-15 minutes
- Your audience will be made up of IR Society board members and/or Fellows of the IR Society, together with industry experts such as corporate brokers.

HOW TO BE SUCCESSFUL: WHAT THE EXAMINERS ARE LOOKING FOR

A Revision Course is provided for candidates as part of the examination preparation. During this, you will be provided with further details on the type of content the examiners are expecting, how they recommend essays are structured and how to prepare for the presentation module.

You will also work through some examination questions. See Appendix 2 for further examples.

In summary, all written answers should show:

- Your skills, knowledge and experience across all the compulsory topics and at least three of the optional topics shown in the syllabus
- Your familiarity with the UK's legislative and regulatory environment and corporate governance standards, at least to the level examined in the CIR
- Your detailed knowledge of best practice IR and how it adds value;
- Your ability to communicate clearly in writing, identifying and justifying your key messages. Answers should be written in a free-flowing dialogue style, rather than bulleted lists of facts
- Your management and leadership potential.

Essays should be structured using the following guidelines:

- They should be approximately 1,500 words long (around three pages of A4). It is unlikely that an answer of fewer than 1,000 words will contain the level of detail required. An essay of over 2,000 words is likely to be overly detailed
- They should be well-structured. A possible structure to use would be:
 - Brief answer to the question posed
 - Context to the question, including reference to the specific regulatory and legislative environment, where appropriate
 - Evidence to support your answer: at least three examples
 - Wrap up – a chance to show the examiners the sophistication of your thinking
- As a rule of thumb, imagine your essay is going to appear in Informed, the IR Society's quarterly journal. As well as explaining your topic for the less-informed reader, you need to add something to the knowledge of a more expert reader
- Wherever possible, you should showcase your experience or use other real-life examples you are aware of.

When answering questions in Section C (Optional Topics) you should also consider the following:

- Answers to optional topic questions should incorporate all the guidance shown above. However, they should take a broader perspective than answers to questions in Section B, demonstrating knowledge outside the core IR role
- You are not expected to be an expert in the chosen optional topic.
- You are expected to understand and demonstrate how the chosen topic interacts with IR
- Only one answer should be on a topic in which you have significant previous experience
- To ensure that you demonstrate the breadth of your experience to the examiners, do not pick the same topic from both the "Principles of IR" paper and "IR in Practice" paper.

In the Presentation module, we are looking for:

- Good command of a topic that demonstrates expertise in IR and ability to answer (with confidence) questions around the topic chosen;

- Ability to impart key messages in the time given
- Demonstration of competencies in the Communications area, including
 - Strong presentational skills
 - Active listening
 - Clear communications
 - Messaging
- Demonstration of competencies in the Personal area, including
 - Resilience
 - Credibility
 - Trusted
 - Authority / presence
- And, from the Leadership competencies, Gravitas.

MARKING AND RESULTS

Once candidates have completed the entire examination (two written papers and one presentation module), they will receive one overall pass/fail result. The actual mark will not be disclosed.

IMPORTANT NOTE: It is not possible to pass overall if you fail either of the two Ethics modules (Section A of Papers 1 and 2).

Written papers will be marked by senior IROs with significant experience in the profession. Each paper is double-blind marked and any significant variation is investigated. The following scale is used:

STRONG PASS:

- Directly answers the question set
- Explains conclusions clearly, demonstrates strong communication skills
- Draws on an extensive range of material, and references relevant regulation, legislation and best practice guidelines
- Demonstrates strong knowledge, significant experience and a total grasp of investor relations.

PASS:

- Directly answers the question set
- Explains conclusions clearly, demonstrates good communication skills
- Draws on a range of material, and references most relevant regulation, legislation and best practice guidelines

- Demonstrates good knowledge and experience and a strong grasp of investor relations.

MARGINAL FAIL:

- Attempts to answer the question set. Fails to draw on the key material, and/or fails to demonstrate satisfactory knowledge of the relevant regulation, legislation and best practice guidelines
- The answer fails to demonstrate satisfactory knowledge and experience.

OUTRIGHT FAIL:

- Fails to answer the question set. Fails to draw on the key material, and/or fails to demonstrate satisfactory knowledge of the relevant regulation, legislation and best practice guidelines
- The answer fails to demonstrate satisfactory knowledge and experience.

The presentation module will be assessed by a group (minimum three people) of IR experts, using a similar marking scale.

If the examiners believe that a candidate's paper is outstanding, they may recommend him or her for a Chair's Prize. This prize will be awarded very rarely.

WHAT HAPPENS IF YOU FAIL

Partial resits may be offered in exceptional circumstances, at the discretion of the IR Society Examinations Committee.

THE COST AND WHAT IT INCLUDES

The cost for the Diploma is £995 + VAT. This covers: examination fees, two half-day training courses, and support from an IR Society mentor.

TESTIMONIALS

The IR Diploma was a good way of testing the breadth of my IR knowledge. Where there were any gaps it prompted me to read up. The topics covered were broad and relevant. Enjoyed meeting the other IROs on the course and hearing their perspectives and experiences
